

1. Setting the scene

- a. We arrive upon a still scene uninterrupted save for the motions of small woodland creatures, something as potent and imperceptible as magic itself is falling steadily, the sheer volume of trees cast a dark shadow over all we can see as the silence is broken. Eyes like headlights cut through the dark air and a gargantuan jaguar carefully steps into the clearing where a veil is pierced revealing two wood elves and a young orc becoming the creature to join them. The council returns to their meeting as the illusion of silence is returned

2. Orientation

- a. You sit on the train looking out of the window into dark mossy walls of the tunnel, suddenly the traincar is blasted with brilliant blue light, despite the unusual speed you are moving at it's been hours since you have seen light, alone natural sunlight. As your eyes adjust you see a cloudless sky and emerald grass covered plain, rich with colorful flowers, and in the distance, buildings dotting a cul de sac made by the mountain range. Next to this town you see a pile of rocks doubling its size, on your left all you can see beyond the plains is dense forest and to your right you behold a mountain range towering above you.
- b. You finally get a chance to see each other without the shroud of darkness, how do you introduce yourself
- c. As the buildings closer and you realize your eyes were deceiving you and what looked like a town was a rather large city of wooden and metal structures. Somewhat far off of the city you see that the towering mass of stone makes up an enormous fortified castle with several walls guarding it. You slow to a stop as you approach a small train station to the side of wall standing at least 60 feet maybe even a hundred. You had seen the capitals walls when you entered that prison but these came close in size.
- d. Soon enough the train stops and As you step on the platform you are greeted by an large tiefling woman carrying an even larger sword strapped to her back. she gives you a cordial nod and sends you inside a the stations building where you are led into the castles gate. It is seems close to a thirty feet width, covered with metal fortification, and lined with holes large enough for a cannon to fit through. You are guided to a door giving you access to the walls interior where you follow a long torchlit tunnel that ends in a rather large auditorium. You being the first in line are ushered to the first row.
- e. A woman quickly walks on stage and addresses the room.
- f. Hello, I would like to open your minds to a new experience that I believe you will find quite intriguing. I am giving you the chance to shed the title of prisoner and don a new name: explorer. We have selected you specifically, elite warriors and magicians capable of great heroics shamefully wasting their potential. We believe you are capable of much more than rotting in prison. More will be revealed as you take your positions but we are thrilled to have you with us and cant wait to see what you find. Now if you will all follow I will show you to your living spaces

- g. These will be your lodgings, you will be linked with the group that you were with in the train, You will live and fight with them, so learn to get a long, If you have any question please direct them towards Captain bright
