 - iii. D lives in a tree
 - c. the party returns to the road there another path is burned into the ground
 - i. the path burns through the woods and as our heroes progress down the path we see that the woods have begun to return to swamp, the water is thinner and dirt becomes muck becomes mud becomes a shallow yet broad pond. Trees support themselves almost as stilts though these trees are different, these trees look rotten and fallow, now that you notice it the water itself looks truly foul, DC 15 will allow you to discern dead looking creatures
3. Temple to Kalreg
 - a. Why is this here: during Kalreg's former rule temples were constructed around the land to worship him as well as provide him military power. In the years after Kalreg was defeated many of these temples were completely destroyed and rid of any surviving allies to the monstrous fiend
 - b. Architecture and vibe:
 - i. No windows and or sources of natural light, only a bizarre red haze the party can't quite understand
 - ii. Walls made of a black porous, brittle, and strong brickwork
 - c. Room to room design
 - i. Entrance
 1. The trap door
 2. The puzzle
 - a. A statue of a human man with a sword in its sheath and arms at his side, looking directly at the ground with his feet shackled to the floor directly across from a large statue of a spire reaching to the sky. The spire is made of a black porous material almost coral esq with a opal gem at its peak
 - i. DC 13 investigation: gems in the humans eyes match the opal in the spire, the building around them has cracks strewn about it
 - ii. DC 16 investigation: a thin almost imperceptible line runs along the neck of the statue, scuff marks on the floor just in front of the statue
 - iii. DC 20 investigation: there are joints along the knees waist, arms and neck. Marks on the shoulders
 - iv. Solution: Pressing down on his shoulders animates the statue to move to the ground on his knees prostrating himself, drawing his sword across his throat moves his head back until the statue is staring at the gem in the spire.
