

1. Geography and land features
 - a. The surface of the Nalu is a dry desert, livable before the drought yet no one is quite clear why. Oases are scattered all across the
 - b. Water from the mountain range flows into the ground and has created a massive system of caves
2. Culture and People
 - a. Why are they here: The people of the eastern desert were originally members of the Gijari people living in the grasslands east of the rainforest. When the kalreg first appeared his wave of fire burned out almost all of their people and culture, only those living in the tunnels and oasis were spared. With no support offered by their Gijari brethren in the forest they were forced to accept Kalreg's rule and worship under him. They were branded heretics and barred from entering the forest
 - b. What is their culture
 - i. They are enduring people, they live almost as a perfect contrast to those living in the forests
 - ii. They live by the law of the desert, save strength, precision, calculated risk
 - iii. How does that pervade their culture
 1. Nothing is thrown away if possible and the practice of waste is deeply shameful. This ideology extends to equipment, food, money, and life. Frugality and generosity are prized above all else and gluttony is the greatest sin of all.
 2. Precision above all else is favored among the Gijari people, targets
3. Current political structure
 - a. Teratory
 - b. Viper u
 - c. Tillamet
 - i. The bulk of the gijari people live here
 - ii. Political Situation: