

- I. kalreg
 1. Goal: Ascend to godhood and create a paradise for him and his subjects
 2. Plan:
 - a. Get summoned
 - i. From sleep he unconsciously was able manifest a physical body into the world to begin the process of waking him up
 - ii. This entails capturing a deity and draining them of their power
 - b. Use the deities powers to terraform the area
 - c. wipe out humankind
 3. Details
 - a. Personal plan
 - i. Where he is trapped
 - ii. Where he goes after he is killed
- II. Kalregs forces
 1. General : fighter
 - a. Roles
 - i. Assembled most of kalregs forces
 - ii. Controls the entire organization in preparation for his lords return
 - b. Followers(chaotic evil)
 - i. Blacksmith
 - ii. Seasoned medium infantry size 3
 2. Wapriest: necromancer
 - a. Roles
 - i. Oversees the summoning process the draining of the water deity
 - ii. Handles the acquisition of new forces
 - b. Followers (neutral evil)
 - i. Regular light archers size 4
 - ii. Guild adept retainer (5th level)
 3. Placeholder: paladin
 - a. Roles
 - i. Controls military forces
 - ii. Led the seizure of the deity
 - b. Followers (lawful evil)
 - i. Seer retainer (3rd level)
 - ii. Young green dragon

Among the number of things that irks me about Dalinar in ROW is his silence to Kaladin after meeting Roshone. You can argue that Dalinar should have known Kal had beef with Roshone after their conversation when Dalinar meets him in prison in WOR (plenty of thoughts on that wretched convo but thats not the point). Upon seeing that Roshone was Kaladins former highlord it's pretty fucking simple to put the pieces together that he is responsible for a great deal of Kaladin's pain. This is pain Dalinar has never bothered to ask about but I digress. How the fuck does Dalinar not mention it at ALL. After undoubtedly understanding the connection, he refuses to acknowledge let alone apologize for his and his family's part in Kal's suffering. Im not gonna sit here and list the things Dalinar owes Kaladin, the list is too fucking long, but I will say a note about Roshone would have been below the bare minimum.

I can just picture a wonderful arc for Dalinar in ROW that reinforces so much of what this series is about. I don't think the man is redeemable, but I think besides the cool glowing swords a lot of the series is about personal growth, specifically through the lens of constant struggle and